Children's Therapy Center Early Intervention Eligibility Process

Referral

Your child has been referred for an Early Intervention (EI) evaluation. The referral may come from the family, the child's doctor, childcare provider or another community agency.

⇩

Evaluation

At the evaluation, a team of professionals will evaluate your child in five areas:

- Cognitive: Learning, thinking, playing , problem solving
- Communication: Understanding what others say; expressing thoughts in gestures, sounds, words
- Motor: Coordinating movements; manipulating toys, sitting, crawling, walking
- Social/Emotional: Getting along w/ others, self-soothing and participating in routines
- Adaptive: Calming, feeding, sleeping and dressing

Children over 16 months are screened for signs of Autism.

Eligibility

At the end of the evaluation, we will discuss your child's eligibility for early intervention services.

- Children are eligible if they show a 25% delay in any area of development.
- Some children are eligible because they have a diagnosis that has a high probability of resulting in a developmental delay.
- If your child is not eligible, we provide suggestions and community referrals.
- If your child is eligible and you choose to enroll in CTC Early Intervention, the next step will be to develop an IFSP.

Individualized Family Service Plan (IFSP)

- At this visit, which is typically held at your home, we will discuss the concerns and priorities you have for your child. We will develop goals and decide what therapy and/or education services are best for your child.

⇩

Services

Once the IFSP is completed, services for your child can begin.

- Early Intervention is a family-based program, so you will be an active participant in your child's services.
- Services might include physical therapy, speech therapy, feeding therapy, occupational therapy, CHERISH (supporting the social and emotional needs of foster children), and/or early education.
- Therapists and educators provide family members with strategies and activities to do during your child's daily routines (meals, play, dressing, outings, bedtime). They will also share information about child development and support you as your child's primary teacher.
- Each family has a Family Resources Coordinator (FRC) to help families develop the IFSP and to help families connect to community resources they may need.

CTC EI aims to empower families within their community and children within their family.
